Wants to Form Club of Film Actresses For Their Own Protection

The motion picture actresses are becoming a clubby lot of young men-they are all young women, by the way-and now they want to have a real club just like the men folks. While most of the actresses have been thinking about it for weeks and months, it has remained for Lillian Tucker to voice herand their feelings on the subject. Lillian Tucker is a newcomer in the film field, appearing in the leading role of "Evidence" as her first picture and preparing to appear now in the lead with Charles Cherry in The Mummy and the Humming Bird." She has had lots of experience on the legitimate stage and is a fairly well known young woman. She believes there is a practical busi-ness side to club life for actresses.

She says:
"If motion picture actresses had owned a club, fake 'agencies' would owned a club, fake 'agencies' would not have dared exist because they would have been found out and prosecuted. The club itself would have maintained, an informal em-ployment bureau, in co-operation with the motion picture companies, and an information bureau, which would have been a clearing house for troubles.

"Men in the motion picture pro-fession to whom I have broached the subject, express doubts as to the ability of the women to organize and maintain such a club. I think the men discredit the intelligence of the men discredit the intelligence of the actresses. Personal jealousies could be overcome in working for a common cause. With a distinct purpose in view—the purpose to establish the dignity of their profession, aid the inexperienced and unfortunate girls who are having a struggle to gain a footbold, and to gle to gain a footbold, and to broaden the interests of those who have succeeded—I have no doubt but what the women could maintain a club. At the same time many of the problems which surround the the problems which surround the profession would disappear."

Miss Tucker suggests that rooms be rented in 2 house in the theatrical district, to be fitted up temporarily for the club. A cafeteria, she feels, would be practical at first. There should be club rooms where the actresses could meet for sociability and where they could stop in to rest. She thinks that the producing companies would be willing to help finance the club to start because the organization might become of real advantage to them through the employment bureau, and she feels that the influence of the club would be felt in a higher standard of work.
